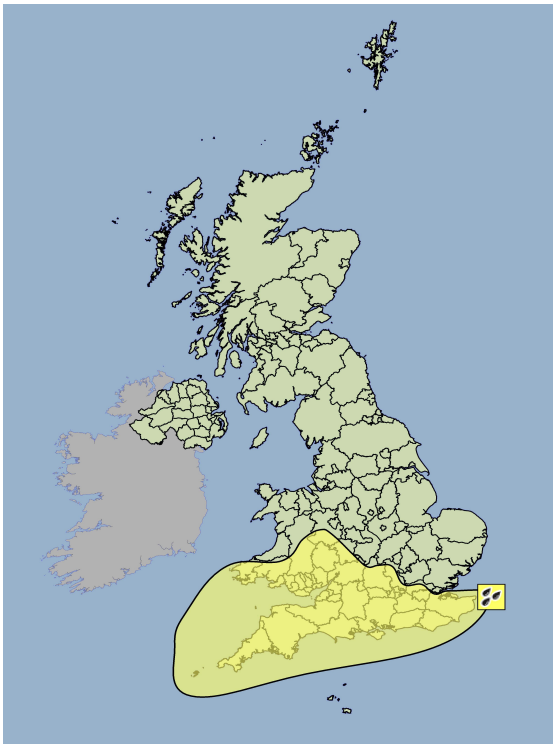
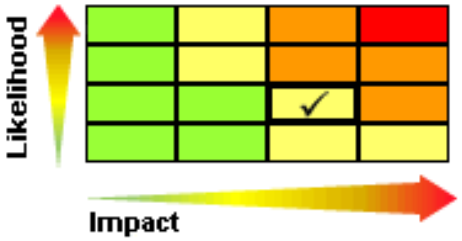
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another area of low pressure and its associated fronts are likely to affect the UK during Monday night and Tuesday, bringing a further spell of heavy rain and strong winds, particularly to southern areas.

There remains considerably uncertainty in the track and timing of this low pressure system, but 10 to 20 mm rainfall is likely quite widely, with over 30mm possible across parts of South Wales and southwest England. With ongoing flooding in some places, any further rain will only add to the problems. Very gusty winds may be an added hazard in places.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Tue, 11th Feb 2014 until 23:45 on Tue, 11th Feb 2014

Further spells of rain, heavy at times, and accompanied by strong winds are expected during Monday night and Tuesday.

The public should be aware of the risk of further disruption due to flooding.

This is an update to the Alert to include some rainfall amounts. A further update is likely on Monday.
